Introduction

The mission of the United Way of the Ocoee Region is to be a community-based organization that leads efforts in identifying community needs, facilitating collaboration, and maximizing resources to positively impact our community.

This report highlights the needs of Bradley and Polk county residents according to the following three data sources:

- 2-1-1 information & referral call data (from July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016)
- Charity Check services received data (from July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016)
- Service Provider Focus Group data (conducted by UWOR in October 2016)

The first two sources represent a different method of service delivery to community members in Bradley and Polk counties. The 2-1-1 system requires a phone call from the individual seeking assistance. If the requested resource is available and if the caller meets the criteria for services, the 2-1-1 call specialist must provide resource information about the service(s).

On the other hand, the Charity Check system collects data from client requests at the service site. As a result of the documentation that is presented in the face-to-face encounter, the Charity Check database is a rich source of information with client names, demographics, and addresses. This is the second year Charity Check analytics provides information about service usage, client characteristics, or types of services provided.

Due to the quantity and unique qualities of the two database sources, the first two sections of this document report out on each data source separately. Each section of the report is divided out by the seven County Commission districts with maps, 2-1-1 data, and Charity Check client data specific to each Commission area.

The third section of this report includes qualitative data from a Service Provider Focus Group that gives an additional perspective on unmet needs in our community, as well as looks at potential root causes for some of the top needs that have been identified through the first two data sources.

Note: The information in this report is dependent upon the accuracy of data entry. Attempts to account for errors or missing data have been made but cannot be controlled for in all instances. Data compiled at the County Commission district level is dependent upon the accuracy of the address information and in some cases (approximately 10%) address information was insufficient.

Executive Summary:

This 2016 Community Needs Report was compiled in-house by United Way of the Ocoee Region staff, with data collection, reporting, and mapping assistance from the United Way of Greater Chattanooga. The report consists of data from three sources including: one year of Bradley & Polk County 2-1-1 data (July 2015 - June 2016), one year of Bradley County Charity Check data (July 2015 - June 2016) and Service Provider Focus Group data (October 2016).

Key Findings & Themes

Overall themes that surfaced most frequently through multiple areas of this report were related to housing, food, and job assistance needs.

Other needs that ranked highly across more than one data source include clothing, health care, transportation and holiday assistance.

74% of all requests for resource information through 2-1-1 call data (n = 1,561) were for basic needs including food, rent, and utility assistance.

87% of all services received through Charity Check data (n = 4,213) were for food, clothing, follow up services, rent, utilities, and job assistance.

Underlying root issues of some of the top needs identified (housing, food, job assistance, and health) through the first two two data sources were further discussed during a Service Provider Focus Group.

Service providers were also asked their perspective on additional unmet needs in our community. The two most frequently mentioned unmet needs identified through the focus group were expanded public transportation options and job (technical and soft skills) training.

Over the past year, the United Way of the Ocoee Region has continued to educate ourselves on principles of community development, collective impact, and how to best help those in poverty without hurting them. One thing that has surfaced repeatedly through many of these conversations as well as our coalition work, is the importance of relationships and walking alongside those we are here to help.

Because of this, we believe that when nonprofits, churches, donors, volunteers, community leaders, and most importantly, those actually in poverty; are working together in tandem to find long-term solutions to community needs, that is when our work will truly start to move the needle.

Section 1: Overall 2-1-1 Data

Section I: 2-1-1 Information and Referral Call Data

2-1-1 is a national resource used by many United Ways, which operates through local and regional call centers. It is a free and confidential helpline that connects community members with information about available social service resources; whether it is for help with food, utilities, childcare, mental health, senior services, etc. The 2-1-1 system requires a phone call from the individual seeking assistance. A certified Information & Referral Specialist on the other end of the phone will ask the caller a series of questions to identify their need and situation, and then refer the person to the resource(s) closest in proximity that address their need(s).

For the one-year period from July 1, 2015 – June 30, 2016, approximately 1,561 calls from Bradley and Polk counties resulted in 2,138 referrals for services for individuals and their families. Of those calling for assistance and reporting employment status, two-thirds were either unemployed (39%) or permanently disabled (29%). Unemployed individuals calling for assistance increased from the previous report from 35% in the 2015 report to 39% in this report. Those with disabilities requesting assistance decreased by 4%.

Approximately 74% of 2-1-1 requests were for utilities, food, housing and basic needs assistance. The next highest requests through 2-1-1 were for holiday assistance, furniture and health care information.

Section 2: Overall Charity Check Data

Section II: Charity Check

Charity Check is a client management tool that allows service providers to communicate and document client services to reduce potential duplication of services received. Charity Check is ideal for nonprofits, churches, and other service providers that can aid in better stewardship of valuable community resources.

From July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016 we were able to pull data from seven (7) local agencies which documented 4,213 services provided for client needs. These organizations include a mix of local churches and nonprofit organizations including: The Refuge (34.4%), Big Spring Baptist Church (24.4%), The Caring Place (20.4%), Neighbors in Need (20.4%), Family Promise of Bradley County (0.2%), Cleveland First Church of the Nazarene (0.1%) and Foundation House Ministries (>0.1%).

Based on needs documented in Charity Check, 1,332 individuals received 4,213 referrals which is an average of 3.2 services or contacts. Based on count and percentage compared to the previous year, food and clothing represented a smaller proportion of the total services. Nearly two-thirds (63%; 2,648) of the total services were for basic needs including food, utilities, and shelter or rent assistance.³ One-fourth of clients (25%) had multiple requests for basic needs.

Charity Check Client demographics

Client demographics present an interesting picture of those seeking help. Nearly half were between the ages of 26 and 45 years old, an age group that can be particularly vulnerable to poor employment prospects based on changes in the workforce demand.⁴ Another factor placing those requesting services due to poor employment options is low adult educational attainment. Those without a high school diploma represented 40% of total clients.⁵

More than half (52%) of the clients served reported children in the household and more than one-fourth (27%) reported no monthly income and 50% reported incomes of less than $753 monthly. This factor combined with the previous statistics on education and adult educational attainment place children at risk for poverty and associated issues regarding early childhood development and academic achievement.⁶ Clients requesting services were predominately White (79.5%) followed by African American (10.5%) and Latino (6.9%).

³ Typically clothing would indicate a basic need as well, but this category was excluded from the total and not considered as an emergency need.

⁴ See report issued by Tennessee's Department of Community and Economic Development: "Economic Benefits of Post-Secondary Credentials in Tennessee."

⁵ Percentages are based on unduplicated client data.

Section 4: Service Provider Focus Group Data

Part IV – Service Provider Focus Group

The United Way of the Ocoee Region conducted a Service Provider Focus Group in October 2016, in order to get an additional perspective on unmet needs in our community, and root causes of some of top recurring needs identified through 2-1-1 and Charity Check data.

The group was made up of 13 individuals from a variety of sectors in Bradley and Polk Counties from the following organizations: Bradley County Schools, The Caring Place, Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce, Cleveland State Community College OneSource Program, Centerstone, Family Promise of Bradley County, First Cumberland United Methodist Church, Impact Cleveland, Neighbors in Need, Ocoee Regional Health Corporation, The Refuge, The Samaritan Center, and The Salvation Army.

The participants answered three questions during the focus group, based upon their experience in the area in which they work:

- 1. What do you believe are some of the root causes/underlying issues of the top needs that we are seeing most frequently reported through 2-1-1 and Charity Check data?*
- 2. From your perspective, what are some of the top unmet needs in our community?*
- 3. What do you believe are existing community assets and/or any future ideas or opportunities for how we can better holistically meet top needs in our community?*

For the first activity, participants were asked to write root causes of needs for the following four areas:

- Housing (ex. affordable housing, rent assistance, utility assistance)
- Food (ex. food pantries, access to healthy food)
- Health (ex. affordable health/dental care, access to health care/mental health)
- Employment (ex. job assistance, job training, career ready workforce)

Participants placed sticky notes of potential root causes for these four areas, and were then able to place stickers on any points that they agreed with. The chart below shows the root causes and the level of agreement from one or more service provider. Organizations were asked to give feedback on the areas in which they worked and did not necessarily have to contribute to each of the four areas.

Focus Group Data: Root Causes of Housing-related Needs

Root cause or contributing issue:	Agreement/consensus level:
Lack of quality affordable housing	10 (77%)

Social and/or behavioral issues	2 (15%)
Limited supports	2 (15%)
Toxic Charity mentality eliminates desire to get a job	1 (8%)
Awareness of the need to update personal work skills	1 (8%)

Service providers were then asked the following two questions, the charts below show the responses to those questions and level of agreement from one or more service provider:

From your perspective, what do you believe are some of the top unmet needs in our community?

Unmet need:	Agreement/consensus level:
Transportation (expanded routes and hours, need for expansion to more industry locations and in rural areas)	8 (62%)
Job skill and career readiness training (technical and soft skills) can help address and solve many of the needs that we see	7 (54%)
Need for more safe, decent, affordable housing	7 (54%)
Need more access to affordable healthy food (ex. through food co-ops)	6 (46%)
Lack of awareness of available job-training options	5 (38%)
Mental health/addiction help & support	5 (38%)
Need for transitional housing options	4 (31%)

Lack of rent assistance to prevent homelessness	2 (15%)
Human trafficking safe house	1 (8%)
Lack of landlord accountability	1 (8%)
Broadband Internet access for all	1 (8%)

Please share what you believe are any existing community assets and/or any future ideas/opportunities for how we can better holistically meet top needs in our community:

Community assets/ideas/opportunities:	Agreement/consensus level:
Collaborative community that cares for individuals in need, many agency partnerships	7 (54%)
Many community resources & knowledge/awareness of what is available	6 (46%)
Many churches, though more coordination is needed – mobilize churches to do mentoring/life skills coaching	5 (38%)
Need for streamlining agency application processes	4 (31%)
Opportunity to reach families through school counselors	2 (15%)

United Way of the Ocoee Region

The Importance of Development/Coalition Work in Identifying Additional Community Needs

Over the past four years, the United Way of the Ocoee Region has also led a handful of coalitions that have started around an identified community need. The Bradley County Housing Coalition, No Child Hungry, and the Mental Health Coalition each have different focus areas, but each of these coalitions follow a similar format that involves: pulling together key stakeholders & experts related to the need; providing opportunities for the stakeholders to network; better coordinating the services currently meeting this need; collecting data to understand what's going on at a macro and micro level; identifying any gaps related to this need that service providers aren't currently meeting; and creating solutions to fill these gaps.

However, as we have progressed through this framework with our coalitions, we have consistently seen something missing. This something has been hard to identify because it hasn't been as measurable as housing units, stable income levels, or mental health needs in our community. It is something that affects not just one, but all phases of the journey as a family or individual travel out of poverty. And it is not something that can be easily fixed through a large financial gift.

This something is relationship.

As this year's focus group for the needs assessment was conducted, the service providers and pastors around the room also started identifying this as an underlying theme. No matter how many times a family shows up to their program, there's still an underlying need for consistent, caring relationships. No amount of programming or service coordination can restore a person's motivation to overcome barriers and get out of poverty in the way that relationships can do this.

This realization also came a few years ago when our Bradley County Housing Coalition suggested writing a grant for a county-wide case manager. This person would walk people through the housing spectrum, helping them navigate programs and requirements for the end goal of reaching stable housing. The coalition soon realized that this would be a daunting case-load for any case manager, but the need was still there: a caring individual to provide clarity and comfort as a family or individual overcame poverty.

As the Bradley County Housing Coalition has conducted our annual homeless census, a handful of homeless respondents have confirmed the same thing. When asked "what would help you reach stable housing?" respondents have stated "a caring individual," and "a friend."

As we have begun to realize this more and more, we have gradually started to build this belief into our coalition work. Instead of No Child Hungry simply being a summer feeding program for low-income children, we have searched for ways to involve parents. We now encourage schools to develop relationships with the parents of the children they serve through the programming. So not only are the children getting a free meal and reading program, but low-income parents are more comfortable and confident talking to their children's teachers throughout the upcoming school year, a potentially scary barrier otherwise, but one that is a huge part of their children's success.

As the Bradley County Housing Coalition has begun creating solutions, we have looked for ways to incorporate the voices of those we are serving. For instance, with our upcoming homeless census and resource fair, we are including a handful of current or formerly homeless individuals on the planning committee. Not only do we believe that their knowledge could lead to better outcomes, but we also realize that including their voices restores dignity to them in a tangible way.

As we have thought how to incorporate relationships into our coalition work, churches have been on our radars more than ever before. Not only are churches strategically poised to provide caring relationships to those around them, but churches are already on the frontlines serving low-income families and individuals. Many churches in Cleveland have some sort of benevolence ministry, and a very common one is food programming. We have begun to tap into this through inviting pastors to be part of our coalition work, especially our work around food. No Child Hungry has recently morphed into Silence the Growl, a rebranding that widens our focus from just food to addressing relationships through this need. This change has hinged on the premise that food is simply a vehicle for developing relationships with low-income families and individuals.

The Silence the Growl meetings have largely focused on how to support pastors in their benevolence work, and have encouraged these leaders to consider a development model of relationship versus hand-outs. When Helping Hurts, a book largely based on development principles, has been instrumental in shaping this philosophy, and Helping without Hurting in Church Benevolence has been key to learning practical steps in implementing these principles. Our goal for 2017 is for the church leaders around the table to have tools to practically make an adjustment in their benevolence programming, however small, to make it more developmental in nature.

As this root need of relationships has surfaced, we realize more than ever that we are not only asking the nonprofit community to shift its values, but everyone from donors to deacons to foundations are also part of this puzzle. In addition, we realize that we are immersed in the Western culture, a culture that often values ease over pain, quick versus long-term, systems over relationships. These cultural values shape all of us, including donors, nonprofit leaders, volunteers, and church leaders. We realize that we are swimming upstream by suggesting that relationships are one of the keys to poverty alleviation, but we can't deny what we have seen through the qualitative data in our coalition work these past four years.

Because of this, we believe that when churches, nonprofits, donors, volunteers, funders, community leaders, and most importantly, those actually in poverty, are working together in tandem to find long-term solutions to community needs, that is when our work will truly start to move the needle.
